QSL Market Update

In another week full of bearish sentiment, the May19 sugar contract traded over a very narrow range last week, posting its low of 12.40c/lb on Tuesday before reaching its high of 12.73c/lb the following session and eventually closing the week right in the middle of its recent range at 12.53c/lb. With little fundamental change in raw sugar news, market attention turned to the London White sugar price. A collapsing premium (price difference between raws and whites) suggests that the market still has some work to do to uncover new buying interest.
